Excerpt: .How does dumb time now and then steal away in its flight all sense and meaning from out the best words of the best of men! Had the Polizon been suddenly born again, and asked his mother if he might go to heaven in a coach and six, it had not been a more childish question than the one which he now proposed. Had he known where the Marchioness then was, as well might he have proposed to his own great heart to carry that drop of water to Dives, as to go back to the Marchioness. But he did not know; and so the pleased prattle between himself and his dove went on, as if they had never been married, and never dreamed of being so. It was the custom of this happy pair to go early to bed, and Dona Pancha always preceded her husband by a couple of hours. It was now very late, and the child-wife informed her husband that she was going to do up her hair. For she passed as much time at night in putting it up as she did in the day in taking it down. The Polizon took out his last cigar, to pass away the time of the hair-dressing--ponder over the events of the day, and make some provision for the probable events of the morrow. For a man who has confronted the wouldbe assassins of a city full of people, and has to...
