Not illustrated. 1900 Excerpt: . meal with the disciples One of the panels under the centre has been filled with remains from another window. It was damaged by a ball in the siege of 1591. at Emmaus. This window, like that at Le Mans, is somewhat Byzantine in character. The absence of a border to the window increases the apparent stiffness, but the colouring is superb, the large broad masses of clear colour, so characteristic of twelfth-century glass, being especially noteworthy. In the centre window (32 feet 10 inches), which consists of 27 panels within a border, we have in the head the Virgin and the Child, and below twelve of the chief events in the gospel history, from the Annunciation to the triumphal entry into Jerusalem. The border to the window is very fine but the lower portion on either side does not seem to be the same work...
