Young President Jackson: Gentlemen: There are certain lines of thought that we must go through, a brief bit of business, before we get to the delight of the evening. The first thing is the roll-call, but it need not be taken orally tonight, because the Secretary tells me that he is taking the sheet of attendance and checking it off. The reading of the minutes of the preceding annual meeting can be dispensed with, because they were published in the proceedings last year and every member, I hope, has read them; but, at any rate, if there is no objection expressed they will be approved as printed. There being no objection, the minutes of the last annual meeting are so approved. Formal notice of this meeting was sent out to the members, so that...
